

I recently finished my appointment as an Ocean Frontier Institute postdoctoral fellow, jointly affiliated with Dalhousie University in Halifax, Canada, and Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Woods Hole, USA working on assessing ocean warming effects on shifting fisheries catches in the NW Atlantic Ocean. I hold PhD, MSc, and BSc degrees from the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (AUTH), Greece. My research focuses on marine fisheries ecology, in particular ecosystem modeling, fish stock assessments, marine protected areas and the benefits of fishing restrictions on marine populations, as well as the effect of fishing and environmental changes on marine ecosystems. I have participated in 7 national and international research projects and have published 35 peer-reviewed journal articles that have been cited more than 1200 times. I serve as a reviewer for 24 scientific journals, and I am currently co-editing a topical collection on “Fishes in changing ecosystems” for the journal Discover Oceans. I have been teaching in undergraduate and graduate courses and workshops, and I have provided volunteer work in environmental NGOs.
